Problems in Aid Camps

In Sudan, over one million people had to leave their homes because of war. They now live in aid camps. Our reporter visited the camps last week. The situation there is terrible.

There are a lot of sick people but there are not many doctors. What is more, there is not much medicine left. There is not much milk powder to feed the babies either. Only a small number of patients have beds and many others sleep on the floor. The people in the camps don't have many clothes and only a small number of them have their own blanket. The situation is getting worse because it has not rained for six months and there is not much water. Many people are hungry and they are waiting for the United Nations lorries to arrive with food for everyone.
